Fall Plant and Flower Festival held at the Pee Dee Market

Gardeners and yard enthusiasts searching for great deals on fall plants for their yards should head straight to the Fall Plant and Flower Festival at the Pee Dee State Farmers Market. This annual event at the market is the place to find everything to make their yard bloom this fall.

The Festival is held October 2-4, at the State Farmers Market located at 2513 West Lucas Street in Florence. The hours are Friday and Saturday, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday, from noon to 5 p.m. As always, the parking and admission are free.

This three-day festival has become an annual event for the market and offers some great plants and flowers to spruce up any garden. There will be numerous varieties of horticultural and agricultural products for the home gardener. If looking to add a little color to a yard then check out an assortment of pumpkins, mums and decorative yard art. The Clemson Master Gardeners will also be at the market answering gardening questions and holding gardening demonstrations.

Visitors are encouraged to bring along a cart or wagon to carry their purchases and to wear comfortable shoes. For more information about the Pee Dee Plant and Flower Festival, call the Pee Dee Farmers Market at 843-665-5154.

What do watermelon, peaches and horses have in common?

Besides being important attributes to agribusiness, the state's largest industry, all were highlights at Onewood Farm in Blythewood on September 11. The SC Department of Agriculture treated the University of South Carolina Equestrian team to locally grown watermelon and peach ice cream. The SC Peach Council and SC Watermelon Association also assisted in the event for the second year.

"It's always a fun day for the team when the Department of Agriculture comes out to our farm in Blythewood," said head coach Boo Major. "I know the girls and I always look forward to the watermelon and peach ice cream they bring, and after an afternoon or practice, they are happy to have a nice treat at the end. For the past several years we've had a strong partnership with the Department of Agriculture."

Each year the Department supports college athletics here in South Carolina through donations of locally grown fruits to various teams. This year a dogwood tree from Reese Plants in Blythewood was donated in honor of equestrian team member Victoria Middleton who was hurt at a competition over the summer. Middleton was recently released from the hospital and is undergoing physical therapy. The tree will be planted by the team on the training facility grounds.

Last summer, Commissioner Hugh Weathers presented the Equestrian team with a plaque to recognize their outstanding academic and athletic achievements. The Department also helped sponsor the team at the South Carolina Athletic Hall of Fame in May, where the team was recognized for their national championship and academic achievements.

"We love coming out to Onewood Farm and cutting Certified SC Grown watermelon and serving peach ice cream to such a wonderful group of girls," said Mary Ellen Tobias, Equine Marketing Specialist at the SC Department of Agriculture. "We support the team wholeheartedly and applaud them on representing the state with their accomplishments."

With two overall national championships in 2005 and 2007 and 17 student athletes on the SEC Spring Sports Honor Roll, USC Equestrian is a force to be reckoned with in the arena and the classroom.

Directing the program since 1998, Blythewood resident Boo Major has coached the Gamecocks to three consecutive hunt seat national titles (2005-2007) and the 2006 co-reserve championship, as well as the two national titles. Assistant coach Ruth Sorrel enters her fifth season coaching the western team, and Alixe Schwartz is returning for her second year as assistant hunt seat coach.

Filling their stomachs and their minds

We all know that if you train up a child in the way he should go, when he or she is older.... then maybe they'll know more about their food. The last part is obviously my farming-biased paraphrasing. I use it because today we're talking about feeding good food and thoughts to small children.

A few weeks ago, I was privileged to participate in the It Takes You! Eat Local celebration at Arcadia Elementary School in Spartanburg. The event, sponsored by Chartwells School Dining Services a Division of the Compass Group, was held to encourage the schools that they service to feature at least one or more locally grown produce items on their menu daily the week of September 21-25, 2009.

The celebration is part of an on-going partnership between Chartwells and South Carolina schools designed to help children develop healthy eating habits. But, the program also helps to improve South Carolina farm income and direct access to markets. The program has blossomed into sort of a mini farm-to-school program for the area.

Chartwells has worked closely with Spartanburg School District 6 to serve approximately 46,000 pounds of locally grown produce valued at $34,600 for a year ending February 2009.

For their effort, Chartwells and Spartanburg School District 6 were presented the 'Best Practice Award' from the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA). The purpose of the award is to encourage and reward outstanding practices in schools in the southeast region of the U.S. and to share the winner's strategies with other schools so that they can also improve their programs and services that are delivered to their students.

For a few years now, we have been promoting Certified SC Grown, not only in supermarkets, roadside markets, farmers markets, and CSA farms, but also in restaurants and school cafeterias. With a USDA grant, we partnered with the SC Department of Education in a pilot program for 25 schools to purchase locally grown fresh fruits and vegetable snacks which were available for students throughout the day. We also have a School Gardens Program designed to provide schools and communities alike with the opportunity to learn healthy eating habits as well as providing an effective and fun way to instill the appreciation for local agriculture and food production in our children and everyone else involved in the garden.

Our goal has been to get consumers of all ages to buy and try produce and products grown and produced within the state. The Spartanburg trip was to focus on communicating with young people. We now have a consumer base wanting locally grown. They look for it. They ask for it. And they even demand it!

Consumer demand creates more marketing opportunities for South Carolina farmers. When farm families are successful, their community's economy is successful. When the rural economy thrives, the state's economy thrives. Tapping into the school food system market is one more way to accomplish that goal. I have been told that the South Carolina school systems will serve over 115 million meals in a year's time. Now that's potential.

Chartwells partners with Marvin's Produce, a produce distributor based in Greenville, and Carolina Produce in Anderson, to work closely with farms where local produce is grown exclusively for the Spartanburg, Anderson and Greenwood School Districts. To ensure food safety, all of Chartwell's vendors undergo a rigorous quality assurance certification process.

Ron Jones, Chartwells Director of Dining for Spartanburg District Schools, said, "Serving local produce not only helps nourish our students, but it also positively impacts the local economy. According to Ecotrust, a non-profit organization committed to initiatives such as Farm to Cafeteria programs, school based locally grown initiatives result in an economic multiplier of 1.87 of school spending." "Using this model," he said, "Chartwells and Spartanburg School District 6 estimated that the $34,600 spent locally actually returns nearly $65,000 to the economy." Chartwells expects this number to increase as the company looks to build on the success and increase locally grown programs in the future.

I commend the public-private partnership among Chartwells, produce distributors, and participating farmers and school districts. All around, the promotion will educate students and customers about sustainability practices, the benefits of eating fresh, local produce and how buying local affects our communities and wellness. A healthy child ultimately means a healthy community - physically and economically.

Congratulations to Arcadia and Chartwell.

Hugh E. Weathers, Commissioner

Basics of forage establishment and management

The Greenville, Pickens, Anderson, and Oconee County Clemson Extension Offices will offer a four-class series on the basics of forage establishment and management at Clemson University's Poole Agriculture Center, October 27, October 29, November 3, and November 5, 6-8:30 p.m.

These classes will emphasize fertility, selection, poisonous plants, pasture pests, annual legumes into perennial grass systems, livestock forage requirements and grazing systems. The classes will be taught by Area Livestock Agents, County Agents and Specialists from Clemson University. The cost of the course is $75 which covers materials, printing and breaks.

This course applies to beef cattle, horses, sheep, goats, or even dairy cattle. Grass Masters is a course designed to give livestock owners the information needed to help them develop and maintain a successful forage based livestock operation. This workshop is open to anyone interested in learning more about forage management. For more information contact Matt Burns, area livestock agent, 864-878-1394 ext. 116, e-mail burns5@clemson.edu.
